GUN: CAPES & BULLETS FLY IN JULY

Remember when you thought you were going to be a rock star?

Money. Champagne. Thousands of people chanting your name... your life was going to be one long limo ride. Then you wake up one day and you're 30 and the limo never came. It's like that only I never wanted to be a rock star...

I wanted to take over the world.

Reckless Eyeballs Press is proud to present the release of GUN, a new ongoing monthly series premiering in July.

From the fog-shrouded docks and alleys where crooked deals are brokered to the greasy tenement offices of fly-by-night mob doctors, GUN explores the twilight world of superviolence through the eyes of amateur bad guy, Trevor Werner, the sinister Mister Twist.

Trevor enters an uneasy alliance with two fellow criminal also-rans: bruised, beautiful Olive Armstrong and aging 60's super-radical, Agent Orange when the trio stumble upon the passed out body of a left-for-dead superhero. The plan is simple: ransom the hero at an underworld 'black auction' and split the take three ways. Of course, like all simple plans it goes murderously awry...

Each page is hand painted in moody washes and is an impressive debut from writer/artist Jack Foster. "It's a throwback to those great old Epic & Eclipse era books," explains Foster. "It gives it a warm, analog look that's stylish and wraps nicely around the story."

GUN #1 will be in stores in July 22, or is available for pre-order or digital download direct from GUNcomic.com.
